

STANIMIR MORFOV
Executive Pay and Outside Options

Abstract

This paper considers a principal-agent problem where aggregate shocks affect both firm's technology and agent's outside options. A calibrated version of the model is used to analyze CEO compensation, the provision of incentives, and the dynamics under the optimal contract. We further investigate the impact on pay-performance sensitivity and relative performance evaluation.