Course Description

The course "Global History" is aimed for checking and refreshing knowledge of basic trends characteristic for the period of New and Modern History. Thus the emphasis is made to trace not facts and figures for different periods but to single out developments which had international scale and shaped real world or global history. Beginning from social, industrial and scientific revolutions of the period XVII-XIX cc the analyses will try to bring more real people to the historical scene. It will assist at the final stage when the study of the main developments in the XX century will try to confirm that the main historical engine is still human creature. Such understanding of what is History can enable students to master more comprehensive courses.

Learning Outcomes

Specifically:

1. Students gain a working knowledge of the history of modern and contemporary period. This knowledge will serve both as a foundation for further study and as a tool for more effectively understanding today's world.
2. Students learn to think critically and comparatively about historical events in modern world. They are able to understand and identify historical themes, causes, and effects.
3. Students are able to use their knowledge and critical thinking abilities to intelligently choose and evaluate published texts and documents, mass-media and scholarly articles on topics related to "Global History" course.

In general: All history courses develop students' knowledge of how past events influence today's society.

1. Students acquire a perspective on history and an understanding of the

- factors that shape human activity.
2. Students display knowledge about the origins and nature of contemporary issues and develop a foundation for future comparative understanding.
 3. Students think and speak critically about primary and secondary historical sources by examining diverse interpretations of past events and ideas in their historical contexts.
