

VASILY A. ANIKIN, Ph.D. in Economics (Russian Academy of Science), Ph.D. in Sociology (University of Essex), Senior Research Fellow, Center for Stratification Studies, Institute for Social Policy, and Associate Professor, Faculty of Economic Sciences, Higher School of Economics; Leading Research Fellow at the Federal Center of Theoretical and Applied Sociology of the Russian Academy of Sciences;

Invited Associate Professor at Kyoto Institute for Economic Research (KIER), Kyoto University, Japan (2018-2019)

He has vast research experience in the field of social sciences and international collaborations. His research interests lie in the field of inequality and socio-economic development. He has published more than 80 papers covering topics on social structure and stratification, occupational structure and human capital, specifically concerning the broad issues of catch-up development and challenges of post-transition. The Winner of the Moscow Government Prize for Young Scholars 2019 in the nomination “Social Sciences”.