

ALINA PISHNYAK, PhD, Director, Center for Studies of Income and Living Standards, Institute for Social Policy, Higher School of Economics

For more than 10 years she conducted research at the Independent Institute for Social Policy. She worked as a deputy director for science at the Institute for Humanities Development of the Megapolis. She is engaged in research related to the assessment of welfare and quality of life, micromodelling the effects of individual social policy measures. The focus is on multidimensional assessments of the situation of households, including individual types of families. She has been teaching at the Higher School of Economics for 19 years.